"Ayurveda" is generally understood as "Science of life" translating "Ayuh (r)" as life and "Veda" as science. However the word "science" in its conventional meaning is not an appropriate equivalent for "Veda". According to Caraka samhita (an ancient treatise on Ayurveda), Ayurveda is the science that defines ered the last accomplishment of human life. Although the pursuit of wealth and pleasure is admittedly a natural part of life, when the means defy the laws of universal dharma, that pursuit becomes a living hell. Dharma, the universal law of nature, is part of every society, every tradition, every religion, as it is part of every human being.
