A fluid flowing past the surface of a body exerts a force on it. Lift is the component of this force that is perpendicular to the oncoming flow direction. It contrasts with the drag force, which is the component of the force parallel to the flow direction. Lift conventionally acts in an upward direction in order to counter the force of gravity, but it can act in any direction at right angles ...

Published continually since 1998, "NEWS YOU CAN USE" was a Blog before "Blog" was even a word! Its intention has been to help inform the football coach and the interested football observer on a wide variety of to pics, usually - but not always - related in some way to coaching or leadership. It contains news and views often (trigger alert!) highly opinionated but intended to be thought-provoking.

Streamlines, streaklines and pathlines are field lines in a fluid flow. They differ only when the flow changes with time, that is, when the flow is not steady. Considering a velocity vector field in three-dimensional space in the framework of continuum mechanics, we have that: . Streamlines are a family of curves that are instantaneously tangent to the velocity vector of the flow.

Stall Speed at  $C_{lmax}=x.xx$  - This appears only on the in-flight analysis, and only if the wing area and airframe weight were specified for the model. It indicates the range of speeds which are at or below the aircraft's stall speed at the maximum lift coefficient (i.e. the speed below which the aircraft cannot fly).
